その他の授業の工夫	This is a student-centered class that uses active learning. The teacher does not call on students to answer questions or recite dialogues during class. Students do speaking and listening activities together in pairs and small groups. These activities maximize student interaction. Such interaction in pairs and small groups teaches students the importance of mutual support in language learning. The teacher monitors this practice and offers support and encouragement when necessary.
時間外学修	Before class, students should read all materials and look up words they don't understand. After class, they should review and practice all materials again. They should practice the pronunciation of difficult words and phrases so they can review the materials smoothly during the next class.
評価方法と評価割合	Regular Attendance, Active Class Participation, Effort and Attitude during Each Class: 50% Final Examination: 50% (注) Absence (regardless of reason) or non-participation in two classes results in a reduction of the final class grade down one level; in three classes it results in a reduction of the final class grade down two levels; in four classes it results in a failing grade. Students, not the instructor, are responsible for being aware of the number of their absences.
テキスト	No textbook will be used. The instructor will provide students with materials for classroom use in each class.
